Re: Supreme Court Ruling Concerning the Scope of Sex Discrimination in Federal Civil Rights Statutes

Attorney General Barr:

On behalf of the undersigned organizations, we write in regards to the Supreme Court’s recent ruling in the consolidated cases Bostock v. Clayton County, Altitude Express v. Zarda and R.G. & G.R. Harris Funeral Homes v. EEOC.1 As you are aware, on June 15, 2020 the Supreme Court held that Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibits discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, and transgender status as unlawful sex discrimination. As this letter details, we urge you to begin coordinating full implementation of this decision, including by instructing your department and other federal agencies to withdraw any guidance or instruction that is inconsistent with the Court’s holding that discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, and transgender status is unlawful sex discrimination. The Supreme Court’s holding in Bostock, as to the textual meaning of sex discrimination within our laws, applies to protections against sex discrimination contained within all federal civil rights statutory and regulatory provisions. This direction will be faithful to decades of legal precedent and is mandated by the Supreme Court ruling in Bostock.

The Supreme Court's analysis of what constitutes discrimination on the basis of sex relied on a textual reading that applies with equal force to other statutory prohibitions of sex discrimination. Indeed, federal courts have routinely relied on the scope of sex discrimination protection provided by the Civil Rights Act to inform decisions regarding sex discrimination coverage under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act,2 the Fair Labor Standards Act,3 the Fair Housing Act,4 Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972,5 and many other statutes.

4 Wetzel v. Glen St. Andrew Living Community, 901 F.3d 856 (7th Cir. 2018); Smith v. Avanti, 249 F. Supp. 3d 1194 (D. Colo. 2017).
The Department of Justice is not only appropriately positioned to coordinate implementation of the Bostock decision across the federal government, but has historically undertaken this role. It is imperative that the Department accept this responsibility and ensure that enforcement of this decision, as to the definition of sex discrimination through federal civil rights laws and regulations, is uniform across the federal government. Departmental inaction or the issuance of contradictory guidance regarding the Supreme Court’s interpretation of the scope of federal protections against sex discrimination, would undoubtedly result in needless confusion, and both public and private liability.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide this information. As we have concluded June, a month when so many organizations, including within the federal government, have traditionally commemorated LGBTQ history and struggles for equal rights, and as individuals and organizations across our nation recommit to working together for racial justice including for Black LGBTQ individuals, we now look forward to confirming the ways that the Supreme Court’s recent ruling will lead to greater equality across so many critical areas.
